Finishes !

Steel Stainless steel owes its corrosion resistance to a thin, transparent, tightly adhering chromium oxide film that forms on the metal's surface. When this film is penetrated, it rapidly reforms as long as oxygen is present. If the surface becomes contaminated with dirt or grease which prevents the oxygen from contacting the metal, corrosion (pitting and discoloration) will occur, therefore it is necessary to keep the surface clean.

Color Powder coats

Wipe gently with a soft cloth dampened with water to keep the clear coat clean and glossy.

Metal Plated Finishes

All metal plated finishes are clear coated to protect the plating from oxidation. Care must be taken to protect the clear coat finish so that tarnishing will not occur. To clean, wipe gently with a soft cloth dampened with water or
